IIT Bhubaneswar completed the semester exams despite the epidemic. A senior official said that the institute had started online teaching in March 2020, even before the lockdown was announced, due to a pre-planned plan.

Bhubaneswar Global epidemic COVID-19 Semester examinations for the session 2020-20-21 have been completed at the Indian Institute of Technology, Bhubaneswar amidst the outbreak of. These exams were held for all other years except for the first year students of B.Tech. An official said that the examination of the first year students would take another one and a half months as the first year admission to IIT institutes across the country was delayed and the semester also started late. He informed that the semester examinations for the rest of the students were completed on 15 May.

A senior official said that the institute had started online teaching in March 2020, even before the lockdown was announced due to the already planned scheme. He said that in May 2020, the institute devised a unique online way to take pen-paper exams with the aim of conducting end-semester examinations. For this, faculty members were also trained and through this process successfully conducted the examination.

IIT Bhubaneswar Director Prof. Raja Kumar said, “Theory classes were conducted online for the entire 2020-21 session due to the epidemic.” The official said that the experimental classes were conducted both directly and online. Education was imparted to students in online experimental classes with live video streaming. He said that except the first year students, the remaining students came to the campus during February-April 2021 and attended classes in the laboratories. The director said that direct laboratory classes for new students were suspended amidst the outbreak of the second wave of the epidemic and would be completed soon.
